#2. Grammar

Most people hate learning the grammar of a second language.

The good news is that you don't need to master it.

The goal is to be able to communicate your thoughts using basic grammar forms.

#3. Listening

Listening is one of the most vital skills to develop.

Force yourself to listen to English TV, movies, and radio.

Listen to people speaking English around you.

If someone in your home speaks English, insist they speak English to you.

A person is seen from behind, sitting at a desk and reading an open book. The book's pages are visible, and the word "Proverbs" can be seen on the left page. The person is wearing a dark, long-sleeved shirt. The background is slightly blurred, showing other people and bookshelves, suggesting a library or study environment. The overall lighting is soft and focused on the reader.

#4. Reading

Read anything in English that you can... newspapers, emails, letters, websites, etc.

Try to read fluently... don't stop at every word you don't know to look it up. Instead, guess it's meaning from the context.

There are many to choose from.

You can buy a book or program that you can use to learn English by yourself.

Three Ways to Learn English

#2. Enroll in an Online Course

There are many organizations that offer English classes.

Some of them require that you access the class at a specific time and others you use at your own pace.

None of them are free.
